

Giving Legacy, LLC

The United States Government is bankrupt. We spend more than we bring in. If we were to shut down and pay everything that we owed, the total liabilities would exceed 60 trillion dollars. Many government-funded programs are set for major reform and our communities are slowly losing capital. Now is the time to act. Corporate philanthropy, private foundations, and charitable giving have never been so desperately needed to help rebuild our country.

The Giving Legacy organization was founded by Christopher Riley and William High for the purpose of working with family foundations and organizations that wish to make a significant difference in our country's future. The Giving Legacy organization, in its efforts of working with these entities, has pulled together over 500 pages of the most comprehensive analyses and reports from top governmental experts and CEOs to prepare for the upcoming economic turbulence. These reports and analyses will be instrumental in determining how corporate philanthropy and private charitable giving strategies can fill the gaps left from reduced government spending.

Together, we can make a difference. It will require sacrifice. It will require bipartisanship. It will not be easy. However, the citizens of America who have not yet been born are counting on all of us to regain this country's economic sustainability. We need to put our country back on a course that will allow future entrepreneurs, inventors, workers, and families the ability to enjoy the freedom that our founding fathers intended them to have. Thank you for your participation in rebuilding America for our future generations.

With a Servant's Humble Heart,

Christopher R. Riley, CEO

